Ans:- A man plays a lover's role by busily composing ballads for his beloved and he yearns for her attention.

Q.13. Bring out the features of the fourth stage of a man as described by the poet.

Ans:- In the fourth stage, a man is aggressive and ambitious and seeks reputation in all that he does. He promises solemnly to guard his country and becomes a soldier.

Q.14. *"They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,"*

Ans :- Context : The above lines are taken from the poem "All the world's a stage", written by "William Shakeshpeare". It is an extract from Shakespeare's play "As you like it".

Explanation: In a drama, every player enters the stage, acts his/her part and then exits. In the same way, We enter in this world by birth. We lead our life in different characters. We exit from this world at the time of our death.

Comment : Shakespeare's comparison of man's life with a drama stage is very apt.

Q. 15. "Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel, Seeking the bubble reputation".

Ans:- Context : The above lines are taken from the poem "All the world's a stage", written by "William Shakeshpeare". It is an extract from Shakespeare's play "As you like it". According to the poet, every man has seven stages during his life time. These lines describe the fourth stage of a man's attitude.

Explanation: In his fourth stage, as a soldier, a man is very jealous in his honour. He is ready to fight with his enemy. He wants to gain the unstable fame and name even by sacrificing his life on the battlefield.

Comment : Shakespeare here shows the fourth stage man's attitude of yearning for reputation.

Q. 16. *"Is second childishness and mere oblivion;
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything."*

Ans:- Context : The above lines are taken from the poem "All the world's a stage", written by "William Shakeshpeare". It is an extract from Shakespeare's play "As you like it". According to the poet, every man has seven stages during his life time. These lines describe the last stage of a man's life.

Explanation: The last stage of a man is known as his second childhood. A child can not see, hear, smell and taste anything, during childhood. When a man grows old, slowly he loses his senses of sight, hearing, smell and taste like the child. So this stage of his life is considered as second childhood.

Comment : Shakespeare clearly expresses his views on the final stage of a man.

Q.17. Why should we not trust the future?

Answer : We should not trust the future even though it may seem pleasant because the future is never fixed. We never know what we might face in our future. So, the poet says that it's better to live in the present because the present is in our hands.

Q.18. How should we treat our past? Why?

Answer : We should bury our past completely, like we bury dead people who cannot return to our present and future. This is necessary because if we bear our past along with us, we will never be able to progress in the present and future. The past is dead and useless.

Q.19. How does the poet ask us about the 'Present'?

Answer : The poet asks us to act courageously in the present and never lose faith in God. He says that people should bury their pasts and move on in life with new vigour and freshness. Our present is a beautiful gift and we should not ruin it by thinking about the past.

Q.20. What is the secret to success?

Answer : The secret of success is that we should let go of our past, live and act in the present and never trust our future however pleasant it might be. We should place our faith completely in God and continue to strive effortlessly. A wise man makes his present strong and bright by working day and night without rest and having firm faith in the justice of God.

Q.23 Why did the king refuse to give reward to anyone?

Answer: The king was not satisfied with the answers of the wise men. They all had given different answers to the same questions because of which he was unable to come to a conclusion, so he refused giving the reward to anyone.

Q.24. What had compelled the king to leave his guards and horse?

Answer: The king knew that the hermit met only ordinary men so left behind his horse and bodyguards and went to meet the hermit in his hut in the woods all alone.

Q.25 What do you gathered about the wise hermit from the lesson?

Answer: The hermit was a weak old man and used to live amidst the woods which he would never leave. He was digging the ground in front of his hut for sowing seeds when king arrived and the tedious task had made him tired.

Q.26 Why is Matilda unhappy with her life?

Answer: Matilda is unhappy with her life because she ceaselessly, felt herself born for all delicacies and luxuries. The shabby walls, the worn chairs in her house tortured and angered her.

Q.27 . What was the cause of Matilda's ruin? How could she have avoided it?

Answer: Matilda's aspiration and unrealistic dreams were the cause of her ruin. She paid due importance to materialistic things. She could have easily avoided if she had remained within her means. She was not a practical lady and had not understood her husband's feelings.

Q.28. ' Paragraph is a soul of any writing'. Explain the importance of Paragraph Writing.

Ans:- Paragraph Writing (Progression of Thoughts In paragraph writing)

A paragraph is a group of related sentences that support one main idea. In general, paragraphs consist of three parts: the topic sentence, body sentences, and the concluding or the bridge sentence to the next paragraph or section. Paragraphs show where the subdivisions of a research paper begin and end and, thus, help the reader see the organization of the essay and grasp its main points.

Importance of Constructing Good Paragraphs

Paragraphs are the building blocks of papers. Without well-written paragraphs that flow logically from one idea to the next and that inform and help support in some meaningful way the central research problem being investigated, your paper will not be viewed as credible and, well, you'll probably receive a poor grade.

Here are some suggestions for troubleshooting common problems associated with developing paragraphs:

1. The paragraph has no controlling idea. Imagine each paragraph as having three general layers of text. The core content is in the middle. It includes all the evidence you need to make the point. However, this evidence needs to be introduced by a topic sentence in some way or your readers don't know what to do with all the evidence you have given them. Therefore, the beginning of the paragraph explains the controlling idea of the paragraph. The last part of the paragraph tells the reader how the paragraph relates to the broader argument and often provides a transition to the next idea. Once you have mastered the use of topic sentences, you may decide that the topic sentence for a particular paragraph really should not be the first sentence of the paragraph. This is fine—the topic sentence can actually go at the beginning, middle, or end of a paragraph; what's important is that it is there to inform readers what the main idea of the paragraph is and how it relates back to the broader thesis of your paper.

2. The paragraph has more than one controlling idea. This is the most common reason why a paragraph is too long. If a paragraph is more than a page long, it likely contains more than one controlling idea. In this case, consider eliminating sentences that relate to the second idea, with the thought that maybe they don't really inform and help support the central research problem, or split the paragraph into two or more paragraphs, each with only one controlling idea.

3. Transitions are needed within the paragraph. You are probably familiar with the idea that transitions may be needed between paragraphs or sections in a paper. Sometimes they are also helpful within the body of a single paragraph. Within a paragraph, transitions are often single words or short phrases that help to establish relationships between ideas and to create a logical progression of those ideas in a paragraph. This is especially true within paragraphs that discuss multiple examples or discuss complex ideas, issues, or concepts.

Q.29. Explain five ways to improve the effective listening .

Ans:- In today's high-tech, high-speed, high-stress world, communication is more important than ever, yet we seem to devote less and less time to really listening to one another. Genuine listening has become a rare gift—the gift of time. It helps build relationships, solve problems, ensure understanding, resolve conflicts, and improve accuracy. At work, effective listening means fewer errors and less wasted time. At home, it helps develop resourceful, self-reliant kids who can solve their own problems. Listening builds friendships and careers. It saves money and marriages.

Here are 10 tips to help you develop effective listening skills.

Step 1: Face the speaker and maintain eye contact.

Talking to someone while they scan the room, study a computer screen, or gaze out the window is like trying to hit a moving target. How much of the person's divided attention you are actually getting. If the person were your child you might demand, "Look at me when I'm talking to you," but that's not the sort of thing we say to a friend or colleague

Step 2: Be attentive, but relaxed.

Now that you've made eye contact, relax. You don't have to stare fixedly at the other person. You can look away now and then and carry on like a normal person. The important thing is to be attentive. The dictionary says that to "attend" another person means to:

- be present
- give attention
- apply or direct yourself
- pay attention
- remain ready to serve

Step 3: Keep an open mind.

Listen without judging the other person or mentally criticizing the things she tells you. If what she says alarms you, go ahead and feel alarmed, but don't say to yourself, "Well, that was a stupid move." As soon as you indulge in judgmental bemusements, you've compromised your effectiveness as a listener.

Step 4: Listen to the words and try to picture what the speaker is saying.

Allow your mind to create a mental model of the information being communicated. Whether a literal picture, or an arrangement of abstract concepts, your brain will do the necessary work if you stay focused, with senses fully alert. When listening for long stretches, concentrate on, and remember, key words and phrases.

Step 5: Don't interrupt and don't impose your "solutions."

Children used to be taught that it's rude to interrupt. I'm not sure that message is getting across anymore. Certainly the opposite is being modeled on the majority of talk shows and reality programs, where loud, aggressive, in-your-face behavior is condoned, if not encouraged.

Interrupting sends a variety of messages. It says:

- "I'm more important than you are."
- "What I have to say is more interesting, accurate or relevant."
- "I don't really care what you think."
- "I don't have time for your opinion."
- "This isn't a conversation, it's a contest, and I'm going to win."

Q.30. What do you mean by formal and informal letters ? Show the difference between formal and informal letters with the help of chart (table).

Ans:- Letters are a form of verbal and written communication, which contains information or message, send by one party to another, to convey the message. Q.31. What were the replies the king received for his first question?

Answer: In reply to his first question, the king was advised to follow a timetable by some men. There were some people who were of the opinion that it was impossible to decide the right time in advance. The king was suggested to keep a note of all happenings around him, avoid indulging in excessive pleasure and do everything that seemed important at any particular time. Along with this he should have a team of intelligent people to guide to him to the right thing at the right time.

Q.32. King has right sense of judgement. Do you agree or not? Give examples in support of your answer.

Answer: The king wanted to be a good ruler and has a fair sense of judgement. He was seeking answers for the three questions which he thought would help him in his mission. The king was kindhearted, when he found the old man tired of digging the ground, he offered him his help. He kept on bandaging the bearded man's wound until blood stopped coming out from it. He was down to earth, he dressed up like a common man spent the night sleeping on floor at the hermit hut. He forgave the wrong and promised to help him in every possible way.

Q.33. The king is the main character of the story. Explain giving three examples.

Answer: The whole story revolves around the king. The king had known the hermit's nature of meeting only ordinary men. So, he gave up his king's attire, left behind his soldiers and the horse and went alone to meet him. He offered the hermit his help in digging the ground. He did this till evening. This helped him avoid the attack planned by the bearded man. He helped the bearded man bandaging his wound and offered him water. He saved his life. This helped him made friends with his enemy.

Q.34. Do you think we should help people in need? Why so?

Answer: We should always help people in need. We have been sent to this world to do good to others. If we are good and kind towards other, people will respect us for our kindness. Being kind and helpful keeps us happy from within. We feel happiness when we bring smile on the face of others. We earn their good wishes and blessings in return; It makes us a good human being. To help others is the greatest motto of humanity and we should adhere to it. The king is an embodiment of humanity and kindness. What more can be learnt from him.

Q.35. The king helped the hermit digging the beds. He even slept on the floor of the hut and lived like a simple man in the hermit hut. What lesson we learnt from this?

Answer: The king wasn't carried away with immature suggestions of his courtiers. The king found the old hermit tried digging the beds so he offered his help to the man. He was accustomed of comfort and lavishness in his palace still at hermit's home he slept on the floor. At our homes we get all the luxuries but if one day there comes a situation where we have to live without them we should be prepared for that. At the end, we must say that he was an embodiment of intellect humility and decisive in true sense.

Q.36 : Why does the poet prefer ...The 'past' is dead, a part of history.

Answer: It is not going to come back, nor basking in past glory can get us the benefit in the present. Pining over sorrowful things already consigned to history only dampens our spirit. In the same breath, 'Future' is uncertain, illusory, and deceptive. Banking on future only robs us of initiative to face the rough and grind of life. Thinking these, the author asks his readers to focus on the present, and do everything with the best of efforts. He asks us to treat God as the guide when we grapple with the tasks of the present.

Q.37 : What does the poet says about his past life and gives a message to all audiences?

Answer: when he was devastated with grief after the death of his wife. However, he drew solace and strength from the Bible, and pulled himself up to face life. The author implores his leaders to shake off despondency, lethargy, and frustration that dot each of our lives at different times. He says that the best antidote to such misery is to take the sorrows and failures of life in one's stride, and forge ahead with renewed vigour, so that the accomplishments of tomorrow outshine those of today. It means leaping to greater and greater heights in one's creative endeavours.

Q.38 : What attitude does the poet challenge and What is the poet's observation?

Answer: The poet gives a clarion call for action, effort, and utilization of all the creative instincts bestowed upon us by God. He has asked human beings to keep away from defeatist thoughts, happy-go-lucky attitude, and laziness. In many ways, such values are also taught to us by the Bhagbat Gita, which says that doing one's duty sincerely is the greatest service to God. Life should be treated as an opportunity the mental faculties to their best extent. Slipping back to inaction due to one failure anywhere is a vice, never to be resorted to by anyone.

The soul is the core of life. It imparts the driving force needed for action, confronting failures, striving anew, and creating something great. Soul is anathema to laxity, excuses, inaction and laziness.

Q.39. A little confession would have changed the life of Matilda. Should we confess our mistakes courageously? Do you agree about above statement?

Answer: Yes, a small mistake makes our life miserable and dark. People who are open-minded and speak the truth stay much happier. A little mistake made by Matilda changed her life completely. If Matilda had confessed that she had lost Madam Forestier's necklace, her life would have been different. Confession could have brought peace of mind. Matilda would have at once come to know that necklace is not a real but it is an imitation. Hard work which Matilda put into repay the borrowed necklace could have been saved. We all get a very important message that we should not delay in admitting our mistake.

Q. 40. On inability to accept our circumstances may lead to an unhappy life. Explain with reference to the story "The Necklace".

Answer: We fail to recognise the situation in which we are placed but rather keep on grumbling. We become frustrated and want our life to be different. We should accept the life as it comes to us and should not keep on cribbing about unhappy circumstances. As we read the story 'The Necklace' we find that Matilda is not at all happy with her husband. She had wished her life to be luxurious. It is this frustration of hers which puts her in a fix and spoils rest of her life. She does not work for solution but rather complicates the situation for her.

Q. 41. 'Love is blind' is a phrase that was justified by Monsieur Loisel in the lesson 'The Necklace'. Substantiate the answer from the story you have read in about 100 – 120 words.

Answer: Monsieur Loisel's acceptance and contentment differ considerably from Matilda's emotional outbursts and constant dissatisfaction, and though he never fully understands his wife, he does his best to please her. When Monsieur Loisel tries to appease Matilda, he does it so blindly, wanting only to make her happy. When she declares that she cannot attend the party because she has nothing to wear, he gives her money to purchase a dress. When she complains that she has no proper jewelry, he urges her to visit Madame Forestier to borrow some. Monsieur Loisel's eagerness and willingness to please Matilda becomes his downfall when she loses the necklace. He is the one who devises a plan for purchasing a replacement necklace and orchestrates the loans and mortgages that help them pay for it. Although the decision costs him ten years of hard work, he does not complain or imagine an alternate fate. It is as if his desires do not even exist or, at the very least, his desires are meaningless if they stand in the way of Matilda's.

Q. 42. 'The Necklace' reveals that vanity is an evil. It may bring joy for short period but ultimately it leads to ruin. If you are placed in a situation similar to that of Matilda, what would you have done? Express your views.

Answer: No doubt, Matilda was proud and self-loving. She was very beautiful and charming and she was proud of her beauty. Because of her beauty, she thought that she was born in a family of clerks through the error of destiny. She felt that she was born for all delicacies and luxuries. She also felt that she was made for expensive frocks, jewels and other such things. Therefore, we can conclude that Matilda was very vain and proud because of her beauty. When we read the story, we find out that she suffered because of her vanity. If I were placed in a situation similar to that of Matilda, I would have valued the love of my husband. I would have not insisted on buying an expensive dress to wear to the party. There would be no question of borrowing an expensive necklace from my friend. I would have saved me and my husband from all hardships which the Loiseles went through.

Q.43. What do you understand by the term communication?

Ans. Communication

Communication is simply the act or the process of transferring information from one place, person or group to another. Every communication involves at least one sender, a message & a receiver (recipient). In other words, communication is used for imparting or exchanging (transmitting) of information (message, idea, view or emotion) by speaking, writing or using some other medium communication has three parts: the sender, the message & the receiver. The sender 'encodes' the message, usually in a mixture of words & non verbal communication. It is transmitted in some way (For ex: In speech or writing) & the receiver 'decodes' it.

There may be more than one recipient & the complexity of the communication means that each one may receive a slightly different message. It is possible that neither of them will have quite the same understanding as the sender.

Some of the definitions for communication are given below:-

Communication has been defined as the transfer of information from one person to another, whether or not it elicits confidence or becomes an exchange or interchange but the information transferred must be understandable to the receiver.

-C.G. Brown

Communication is an exchange of fact, ideas, opinions or emotions by two or more persons.

-Summer & Newman

Q44. Define communication as a process.

Ans. THE PROCESS OF COMMUNICATION

The process of communication is best understood with the help of communication flow chart:-

1. Sender- The process of communication begins when the sender feels the need for it and the idea generates in his mind. Sender is a source of the message. The sender may be a speaker, a writer or an actor. He (Sender) must have clear picture in his mind of what he wants to communicate.
2. Encoding- When the sender puts his ideas or facts into words, symbols, pictures or gestures which the other person can be understand this part of communication process is called encoding. It also involves the choice of appropriate media so that idea is translated into message can be easily transmitted (conveyed) to others.
3. Message- A message means what is being communicated it may be verbal or non-verbal; message is the heart of communication.
4. Receiver- The person or group to whom the message is directed is known as receiver. This receiver represents the destination of the message. He may be a listener, reader or a viewer.
5. Decoding- The receiver translate the words and symbols used in the message into ideas and interprets to obtain its meaning. This is called decoding.
6. Channel and medium- The channel connects the sender and the receiver, for instance, time table of a college is the channel which ensures that the teacher and the student go to the same classroom at the same time.
7. Feedback- The feedback is the key element in communication and it is the only way of judging the effectiveness and efficiency of the conveyed message. Feedback indicates the knowledge about the outcome of the communication. It begins with the receivers to the conveyed message and ends when response reaches to the sender. Feedback enable the sender to know whether his message has been properly understood and it has the desired effect on the mind and behavior of the receiver. So, with the help of the feedback the audience can control the speaker

Q45.. List any five steps to improve fluency in English speaking.

Ans. The few steps for improving fluency in speaking-

Here are five steps you can take to improve the fluency in your speaking:

1. Listen to yourself speak

To help you improve your speaking, record yourself speaking. You can capture an actual presentation at work or simply speak for several minutes on your own. Listen to yourself and identify areas that you can improve, such as sharpening your pronunciation and eliminating filler words. Consider asking close friends and family to listen to you speak and ask for their feedback.

2. Check your speed

Strong articulation involves knowing how to use the appropriate rate of speech. Speaking too quickly can make it difficult for people to understand you and follow your thoughts, while speaking too slowly may imply that you are not confident or knowledgeable of your material. Generally, a conversational speaking tone is between 120 and 150 words per minute. You can use your recorded speech to measure your speech rate by converting the audio to text and pasting it into a word counting program.

3. Watch for unnecessary words

Try to eliminate filler words from your speaking, such as "um," "like" and "okay." These words do not add substance to your speaking and may distract your listeners. Using streamlined, precise speech patterns can suggest confidence and help your audience understand you better and stay interested in your ideas.

4. Use pauses effectively

Breaks in your speaking can be strategic ways to emphasize certain points and allow you to organize your thoughts before speaking. When you pause during a speech, it gives your audience time to think about your last statement. It denotes the seriousness or importance of the subject.

5. Practice pronunciation

When you listen to yourself speak, you may notice that certain words or sounds present challenges for you. Practice saying these words each day, focusing on each syllable and sound and emphasizing the correct part of the word. For example, the word "mischievous" has an emphasis on the first syllable, "mis." If you're unsure of how to pronounce certain words, look them up and listen to audio examples of their pronunciation.

Q46. What do you mean by effective interpersonal communication?

Ans. Interpersonal communication is an interaction between two people in which people co-define and negotiate relationship by using communication in face to face environment.

PRINCIPALS AND CHARACTERISTICS OF INTERPERSONAL COMMUNICATION

- 1     Interpersonal communication is complicated- The number of variables involves in interpersonal communication makes it complicated.
- 2     Interpersonal communication is Purposeful- There is always a purpose with the interpersonal communication. We don't interact for the sake of interacting there is always a purpose behind it.
- 3     Interpersonal communication is Inescapable- Man is a social animal; he cannot keep away from communication. He constantly communicates with other person through gestures and facial expression.
- 4     Interpersonal communication is Transactional- When we communicate with other person who physically
- 5     Interpersonal communication is Relational- When we interact with other person, our relationship is reveals our tone and style of communication depends upon our relationship.

Q47. Why are communication skills important for any student?

Ans. IMPOTENCE OF COMMUNICATION SKILLS FOR CAREER DEVELOPMENT OF ANY STUDENT

I. Base for action:- Communication acts as a base for any action. Any activity begins with communication which brings information necessary to begin with.

II. Planning becomes easy:- Communication facilitates planning is made easy by communication policies & programmes for their acquisition can be prepared and implemented. In the entire process communication plays a vital role, it also facilitates managerial planning of any student.

III. Means of coordination: Communication is an important role for coordination the efforts of various students at work in the same place.

IV. Aids in decision making:- The information connected through communication aids is decision making. Communication facilitates excess to the vital information required to take decisions.

Student would not be able to take decisions in the absence of communication.

V. Provides effective leadership:- A communication skill brings student near to his subordinates & exchange ideas of submits ideas & appropriate proposals & their opinions. It seeks advices & makes decisions for each students. In this way he leads his people to accomplish the student's goal.

VI. Boosts moral & motivation:- An effective communication system in skills confidence among students ensuring change in their attitude & behavior. The main cause of conflict & dissatisfaction is misunderstanding which can be removed through communication skills.

Q48. List any three sender oriented barriers.

Ans. Three Barriers oriented by sender:

Bad Expression- Badly Expressed message lost their impact. Use of coin words, jargons (technical words) and technical terms with special meaning prevents effective communication. Where the receiver does not understand the meaning of the conveyed message.

Faulty Translation- Often people translate words in literal sense. Therefore, losing the spirit behind the words. Inaccurate translation leads to misunderstanding and confusion.

Word with different Meaning- Communication is mainly carried through spoken and written words but some conveys different meaning to different people. When the listener or reader assigns a different meaning to a words then there occurs a miscommunication.

Q49. Effective communication is key to organization success. Justify with the seven C's of Communication.

Ans. 7 C'S OF COMMUNICATION (QUALITES OF GOOD COMMUNICATION)

The basic qualities of communication can be discussed under the following headings:

1. Clarity- Clarity in communication represents clarity in thoughts and expressions. Communication process begins with the generation of ideas or thoughts in the mind of the communicator. Clarity of thoughts means that the communicator must be clear in his mind about-

- What to say
- Why to say
- To whom to say
- When to say.

After the communicator is clear in his thoughts he must express it in a clear language. This refers to the clarity of expressions and requires proper encoding of the message on the part of the communicator.

2. Completeness- Every communication should be complete in all respect and must provide optimum details. Incomplete information may leave the receiver guessing for the actual intent of the message. Incomplete message may also create misunderstanding and delay in response.

3. Correctness- Majority of conflicts in modern world occur due to the wrong transmission and incorrect information's so we must check the accuracy and authenticity of the message before responding to it because incorrect information may leads to conflicts and misunderstanding.

4. Consideration- To communicate effectively, one must have the ability to see and think from the listener's point of view. The communicator should able to understand the position of the listener. He should use human approach and must care for the emotions and sentiments of the listener. He should basically focus on the need of the listener.

5. Concentration (attentiveness)- While sending and receiving a message one must pay full attention while transmitting information attention is necessary to ensure that all the relevant details are included in a clear and correct manner.

6. Conciseness- The message should be complete in all respect and one should avoid unnecessary and irrelevant information because irrelevant information may cause misunderstanding and creates confusion in the mind of the receiver.

7. Courtesy- Communication is always facilitated by humble and polite approach communicator must show a friendly and humble behavior towards the listener as this will also encourage the listener to show politeness. For ensuring courtesy the things should be kept in mind are Apologize modestly, Thank generously and avoid the usage of negative and irritating words.

8. Feedback- Feedback plays a vital role in communication. The process of communication remains incomplete without a proper feedback. Feedback helps the sender to analyze the understanding of the message by the receiver.

9. Noise free- Noise can disturb the flow of communication and an effective communication is always free from all sorts of noise.

Q.50. Define the benefits of effective listening skills.

Ans - Listening is a significant part of communication process. Communication cannot take place until and unless a message is heard and retained thoroughly and positively by the receivers/listeners. Listening is a dynamic process. Listening means attentiveness and interest perceptible in the posture as well as expressions. Listening implies decoding (i.e., translating the symbols into meaning) and interpreting the messages correctly in communication process.

1 Listening builds trust

When you make the effort to listen to someone, they recognize your interest. They can tell that you're invested in what they're saying. This makes them more comfortable sharing with you and being open. If you were only half-listening, not making eye contact, or glancing at your phone, the other person won't want to waste their breath. They won't trust you to respect their thoughts and feelings.

2 Listening reduces misunderstandings

Misunderstandings are one of the most common effects of poor communication. When people aren't listening to each other, it's very easy to mishear something or misinterpret someone's meaning. Many times, misunderstandings aren't a big deal, but some can have major consequences. As an example, if someone isn't listening when their friend explains they have a certain food allergy, serving them a dish with a dangerous ingredient could be life-threatening.

3 Listening helps eliminate conflict

Poor listening skills are at the root of a lot of conflicts. Besides sometimes causing misunderstandings, not listening well frustrates people engaged in important conversations. People want to feel respected, which is irrevocably tied to feeling heard. You don't necessarily need to agree, but simply making the effort to hear another perspective keeps the situation calmer. When everyone feels calm and safe, it's much easier to work through tense situations without things escalating to conflict.

4 Listening encourages empathy

Humans are naturally empathetic, but we all have biases and assumptions that come from our upbringing and experiences. When you talk to people who have different backgrounds and experiences, it can be tempting to lean on preconceived notions. Instead, you can commit to listening rather than assuming.

When you hear right from a source, you'll have a deeper understanding of their perspective, which is key to having empathy.

5 Listening improves romantic relationships

Relationship experts always talk about the importance of listening. Poor communication is behind a lot of the conflict and heartache in romantic relationships. By listening to one another, you create a safe, judgment-free place. This can take a lot of practice as many struggling couples are used to interrupting and talking over each other. A qualified couple's therapist can recommend listening exercises that make the process more structured.

6 Listening improves business relationships

If your career involves interacting with others, you know how vital good communication is.

Misunderstandings and conflict can derail projects and earn companies bad reputations. By committing to listening better, you can build strong relationships with coworkers and clients. People will feel respected and eager to work with you.

7 Listening helps deepen your friendships

Listening doesn't only improve your romantic or business relationships; it deepens your friendships, too. If you're feeling distant from your old friends or are struggling to connect with new ones, being a better listener could be a game-changer. The benefits of listening – greater trust, fewer misunderstandings, and more empathy – translate well to friendships. It's worth the effort. Deeper friendships are linked to better physical and mental health!

8 Listening increases your productivity

Whether you're at work or in school, listening is very important to your success. People who are good listeners are more likely to retain information, understand what's being required of them, and ask the right questions. This is a valuable skill in group projects and meetings. Many people think they need to talk a lot to contribute, but listening is arguably more important. If everyone listens to each other, there are fewer misunderstandings. This saves everyone's time.

Q. 51. Can you explain the blocks of effective listening skill? Explain with illustrations.

Ans - There are many things that get in the way of listening and you should be aware of these barriers, many of which are bad habits, in order to become a more effective listener. Barriers and bad habits to effective listening can include:

- Trying to listen to more than one conversation at a time, this includes having the television or radio on while attempting to listen to somebody talk; being on the phone to one person and talking to another person in the same room and also being distracted by some dominant noise in the immediate environment.
- You find the communicator attractive/unattractive and you pay more attention to how you feel about the communicator and their physical appearance than to what they are saying. Perhaps you simply don't like the speaker - you may mentally argue with the speaker and be fast to criticise, either verbally or in your head.
- You are not interested in the topic/issue being discussed and become bored.
- Not focusing and being easily distracted, fiddling with your hair, fingers, a pen etc. or gazing out of the window or focusing on objects other than the speaker.
- Feeling unwell or tired, hungry, thirsty or needing to use the toilet.
- Identifying rather than empathizing - understanding what you are hearing but not putting yourself in the shoes of the speaker. As most of us have a lot of internal self-dialogue we spend a lot of time listening to our own thoughts and feelings - it can be difficult to switch the focus from 'I' or 'me' to 'them' or 'you'. Effective listening involves opening your mind to the views of others and attempting to feel empathetic. (See our page: What is Empathy? for more information)
- Sympathizing rather than empathizing - sympathy is not the same as empathy, you sympathise when you feel sorry for the experiences of another, to empathise is to put yourself in the position of the other person.
- You are prejudiced or biased by race, gender, age, religion, accent, and/or past experiences.

- You have preconceived ideas or bias - effective listening includes being open-minded to the ideas and opinions of others, this does not mean you have to agree but should listen and attempt to understand.

- You make judgments, thinking, for example that a person is not very bright or is under-qualified so there is no point listening to what they have to say.

- Previous experiences – we are all influenced by previous experiences in life. We respond to people based on personal appearances, how initial introductions or welcomes were received and/or previous interpersonal encounters. If we stereotype a person we become less objective and therefore less likely to listen effectively.

- Preoccupation - when we have a lot on our minds we can fail to listen to what is being said as we're too busy concentrating on what we're thinking about. This is particularly true when we feel stressed or worried about issues.

- Having a Closed Mind - we all have ideals and values that we believe to be correct and it can be difficult to listen to the views of others that contradict our own opinions. The key to effective listening and interpersonal skills more generally is the ability to have a truly open mind - to understand why others think about things differently to you and use this information to gain a better understanding of the speaker.

Q. 52. What do you understand by reading?

Ans - This Chapter is mainly focusing on the art of reading skills, levels of reading and different techniques to be adopted for professional success. Reading increases one's knowledge, understanding and intelligence. One must read not only the printed lines, but also read between the lines, behind the lines and beyond the lines for symbolic meanings, concealed meanings and ironic meanings. The style or method of reading depends upon the reader's purpose or intent.

Reading any material is expected to make the reader more competent and give him more knowledge and insight. In fact, reading is a means of learning. The goal in reading is not speed but flexibility. Effective reading is an active reading. Therefore one must know the purpose and intent of one's reading. Since reading is thinking under the stimulus of the printed page, it is a psycholinguistic guessing game. Reading certainly makes a full man. The teachers, students and other professional readers must concentrate on this intellectual soft skill which is a challenging and profitable activity for a modern reader to get success in his career.

The style or method of reading depends upon the reader's purpose or intent. At the lowest mechanical level, reading is the interpretation of printed or written symbols or words into speech or its mental equivalent. Another conceptual level of reading incorporates the idea of literal meaning. Yet another conceptual level of reading involves an active outgoing attitude on the part of the reader. He makes an attempt to relate the present reading material to other writings related to the topic, the reader's own experience, the times in which the author wrote the reading material and his intent in writing the material. One more concept of reading is the personal meaning that reading a particular material has for a particular reader. After all, reading any material must make the reader more competent, and give him more knowledge and insight. One must have an idea of the nature of reading, the goals to be attained, and the methods and material required to attain these goals.

Q.53. Describe about the Writing skills and Art of condensation.

Ans. The second half of the 20th century saw a significant rise of demand for qualified engineers, mostly because after the World War II there was a lot to be rebuilt but also science and technology started to develop rapidly. Large companies, often owned by people that weren't engineers, but rich investors, needed specialists that could communicate in a way that was easy to understand. The late 60's introduced technical writing which became one of the essential soft skills for every aspiring engineer. The reasons why writing is important nowadays vary and hold value to both engineers and their companies. In this article, we will discuss some of the major benefits that good writing skills hold for engineers.

The Art of Condensation

The art of condensation is the process to make any piece of writing precise by omitting unnecessary elements these art of condensation in creative writing is synonymous with precise writing.

According to Collins dictionary:

“To make a precis of a given passage is to extract its main points and express them clearly.”

According to Oxford dictionary

“A concise or abridged statement a summary or abstract.”

In Fact precis or the art of condensation is just a straight forward statement of the bare facts without any unnecessary trimming that means it must be able to stand alone and make a complete sense.” characteristics of art of condensation.

Characteristics of art of condensation

We should remember 5 characteristics of art of condensation.

1. Completeness
2. compactness
3. conciseness
4. Clarity
5. Coherence

1. Completeness: the precise must have the essential contents of the original passage without omitting any important fact.

2. Compactness: all the ideas we produced from the original document should form compactness. The words end sentence is should not convey a sense of unity with each other.

3. Conciseness: brevity is the sense of precis. It is achieved by avoiding repetitions and omitting ornamental phrases etc. But brevity should not be achieved at the cost of clarity. There should be economy of words but not of ideas.

4. Clarity: the precis should have clarity of expressions. This can be achieved by getting rid of redundancy. It should be in the language which could be understood by everyone.

5. Coherence: the main theme should run through the sentences like the string of a necklace. All the sentences and ideas in a precis should follow one after other in unbreakable chain. They should follow our natural order of development. One sentence should suggest the next and so on. Above all the presses should not like a collection of disjointed sentences, but well connected one.

Q.54. Explain about the structure of paragraph writing and its importance.

Ans - Paragraph Writing (Progression of Thoughts In paragraph writing)

A paragraph is a group of related sentences that support one main idea. In general, paragraphs consist of three parts: the topic sentence, body sentences, and the concluding or the bridge sentence to the next paragraph or section. Paragraphs show where the subdivisions of a research paper begin and end and, thus, help the reader see the organization of the essay and grasp its main points.

Importance of Constructing Good Paragraphs

Paragraphs are the building blocks of papers. Without well-written paragraphs that flow logically from one idea to the next and that inform and help support in some meaningful way the central research problem being investigated, your paper will not be viewed as credible and, well, you'll probably receive a poor grade.

Here are some suggestions for troubleshooting common problems associated with developing paragraphs:

1. The paragraph has no controlling idea. Imagine each paragraph as having three general layers of text. The core content is in the middle. It includes all the evidence you need to make the point. However, this evidence needs to be introduced by a topic sentence in some way or your readers don't know what to do with all the evidence you have given them. Therefore, the beginning of the paragraph explains the controlling idea of the paragraph. The last part of the paragraph tells the reader how the paragraph relates to the broader argument and often provides a transition to the next idea. Once you have mastered the use of topic sentences, you may decide that the topic sentence for a particular paragraph really should not be the first sentence of the paragraph. This is fine—the topic sentence can actually go at the beginning, middle, or end of a paragraph; what's important is that it is there to inform readers what the main idea of the paragraph is and how it relates back to the broader thesis of your paper.

4. The paragraph has more than one controlling idea. This is the most common reason why a paragraph is too long. If a paragraph is more than a page long, it likely contains more than one controlling idea. In this case, consider eliminating sentences that relate to the second idea, with the thought that maybe they don't really inform and help support the central research problem, or split the paragraph into two or more paragraphs, each with only one controlling idea.

5. Transitions are needed within the paragraph. You are probably familiar with the idea that transitions may be needed between paragraphs or sections in a paper. Sometimes they are also helpful within the body of a single paragraph. Within a paragraph, transitions are often single words or short phrases that help to establish relationships between ideas and to create a logical progression of those ideas in a paragraph. This is especially true within paragraphs that discuss multiple examples or discuss complex ideas, issues, or concepts.

Structure and Writing Style

I. General Structure

Most paragraphs in an essay parallel the general three -part structure of each section of a research paper and, by extension, the overall research paper, with an introduction, a body that includes facts and analysis, and a conclusion. You can see this structure in paragraphs whether they are narrating, describing, comparing, contrasting, or analyzing information. Each part of the paragraph plays an important role in communicating the meaning you intend to convey to the reader.

Introduction: the first section of a paragraph; should include the topic sentence and any other sentences at the beginning of the paragraph that give background information or provide a transition.

Body: follows the introduction; discusses the controlling idea, using facts, arguments, analysis, examples, and other information.

Conclusion: the final section; summarizes the connections between the information discussed in the body of the paragraph and the paragraph's controlling idea. For long paragraphs, you may also want to include a bridge sentence that introduces the next paragraph or section of the paper. In some instances, the bridge sentence can be written in the form of a question. However, use this rhetorical device sparingly, otherwise, ending a lot of paragraphs with a question to lead into the next paragraph sounds cumbersome.

NOTE: This general structure does not imply that you should not be creative in your writing. Arranging where each element goes in a paragraph can make a paper more engaging for the reader. However, do not be too creative in experimenting with the narrative flow of paragraphs. To do so may distract from the main arguments of your research and weaken the quality of your academic writing.

II. Development and Organization

This is the "controlling idea," or the thesis statement from which you compose the remainder of the paragraph. In other words, your paragraphs should remind your reader that there is a recurrent relationship between your controlling idea and the information in each paragraph. The research problem functions like a seed from which your paper, and your ideas, will grow. The whole process of paragraph development is an organic one—a natural progression from a seed idea to a full-blown research study where there are direct, familial relationships in the paper between all of your controlling ideas and the paragraphs which derive from them.

There are many techniques for brainstorming but, whichever one you choose, this stage of paragraph development cannot be skipped because it lays a foundation for developing a set of paragraphs [representing a section of your paper] that describes a specific element of your overall analysis. Each section is described further in this writing guide.

Given these factors, every paragraph in a paper should be :

- Unified—All of the sentences in a single paragraph should be related to a single controlling idea [often expressed in the topic sentence of the paragraph].

- Clearly related to the research problem—The sentences should all refer to the central idea, or the thesis, of the paper.

- Coherent—The sentences should be arranged in a logical manner and should follow a definite plan for development.

• Well-developed—Every idea discussed in the paragraph should be adequately explained and supported through evidence and details that work together to explain the paragraph's controlling idea.

Q.55. Explain these lines:-

*“Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation”.*

Ans - Context : The above lines are taken from the poem “All the world’s a stage”, written by “William Shakeshpeare”. It is an extract from Shakespeare’s play “As you like it”. According to the poet, every man has seven stages during his life time. These lines describe the fourth stage of a man’s attitude.

Explanation: In his fourth stage, as a soldier, a man is very jealous in his honour. He is ready to fight with his enemy. He wants to gain the unstable fame and name even by sacrificing his life on the battlefield.

Comment : Shakespeare here shows the fourth stage man’s attitude of yearning for reputation.

Q.56. Explain these lines:-

*“Is second childishness and mere oblivion;
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.”*

Ans - Context : The above lines are taken from the poem “All the world’s a stage”, written by “William Shakeshpeare”. It is an extract from Shakespeare’s play “As you like it”. According to the poet, every man has seven stages during his life time. These lines describe the last stage of a man’s life.

Explanation: The last stage of a man is known as his second childhood. A child can not see, hear, smell and taste anything, during childhood.

When a man grows old, slowly he loses his senses of sight, hearing, smell and taste like the child. So this stage of his life is considered as second childhood.

Comment : Shakespeare clearly expresses his views on the final stage of a man.

Q.57 Explain these lines:-

“They have their exits and their entrances;

And one man in his time plays many parts,”

Ans - Context : The above lines are taken from the poem “All the world’s a stage”, written by “William Shakespeare”. It is an extract from Shakespeare’s play “As you like it”.

Explanation: In a drama, every player enters the stage, acts his/her part and then exits. In the same way, We enter in this world by birth. We lead our life in different characters. We exit from this world at the time of our death.

Comment : Shakespeare’s comparison of man’s life with a drama stage is very apt.

Q. 58. Describe the various stages of a man’s life picturised in the poem “All the World’s a stage.”

Ans - According to Shakespeare, the world is a stage and everyone is a player. He says that every man has seven stages during his life time. The first stage of a man is childhood. He plays in the arms of his mother. He often vomits and cries in this stage. In his second stage, the man is an unwilling school going student. He becomes a lover in his third stage. He is very busy composing ballads for his beloved and yearns for her attention. In the fourth stage, he is aggressive and ambitious. He seeks reputation in all what he does. He is ready to guard his country and becomes a soldier. In his fifth stage, he becomes a fair judge with maturity and wisdom. In the sixth stage, he is seen with loose pantaloons and spectacles. His manly voice changes into a childish treble. The last stage of all is his second childhood. Slowly, he loses his faculties of sight, hearing, smell and taste and exits from the roles of his life. Thus Shakespeare pictures the seven stages of a man's life in the poem 'All the World's a Stage'.

Q. 59 Shakespeare has skilfully brought out the parallels between the life of man and actors on stage. Elaborate this statement with reference to the poem.

Ans - Shakespeare considers the whole world a stage where men and women are only actors. In a drama, every player enters the stage, acts his/her part and then exits. In the same way, We enter in this world by birth. We lead our life in different characters. We exit from this world at the time of our death. Shakespeare says that every man has seven stages during his life time. In a drama, a player loves his beloved for the sake of the play. At the end, the players say goodbyes and part away. In real life, husband and wife lead their life till death knocks at their door. Like the drama's end, death parts them. The players in the drama really wants the reputation for their performance. For fame and name, they give their best on the stage. A man in the fourth stage also is an aggressive and ambitious. He seeks reputation in all what he does, like the player in the drama. Thus Shakespeare has skilfully brought out the parallels between the life of man and actors on stage.

Q. 60. How does the poet as tell about the 'Present'?

Ans- The poet asks us to act courageously in the present and never lose faith in God. He says that people should bury their pasts and move on in life with new vigour and freshness. Our present is a beautiful gift and we should not ruin it by thinking about the past.

Q. 61. What is the secret to success?

Ans - The secret of success is that we should let go of our past, live and act in the present and never trust our future however pleasant it might be. We should place our faith completely in God and continue to strive effortlessly. A wise man makes his present strong and bright by working day and night without rest and having firm faith in the justice of God.

Q. 62. What role does God play in a person's life? What should man do?

Ans - God plays the most important role in a person's life. He makes one work towards success even if there are obstacles in one's path. Man should place his faith whole heartedly in God. Only then will he be able to confidently work and achieve great heights.

Q. 63. What attitude does the poet challenge and What is the poet's observation?

Ans- The poet gives a clarion call for action, effort, and utilization of all the creative instincts bestowed upon us by God. He has asked human beings to keep away from defeatist thoughts, happy-go-lucky attitude, and laziness. In many ways, such values are also taught to us by the Bhagbat Gita, which says that doing one's duty sincerely is the greatest service to God. Life should be treated as an opportunity the mental faculties to their best extent. Slipping back to inaction due to one failure anywhere is a vice, never to be resorted to by anyone.

The soul is the core of life. It imparts the driving force needed for action, confronting failures, striving anew, and creating something great. Soul is anathema to laxity, excuses, inaction and laziness.

Q.64. The king is the main character of the story. Explain giving three examples.

Ans - The whole story revolves around the king. The king had known the hermit's nature of meeting only ordinary men. So, he gave up his king's attire, left behind his soldiers and the horse and went alone to meet him. He offered the hermit his help in digging the ground. He did this till evening. This helped him avoid the attack planned by the bearded man. He helped the bearded man bandaging his wound and offered him water. He saved his life. This helped him made friends with his enemy.

Q.65. Do you think we should help people in need? Why so?

Ans - We should always help people in need. We have been sent to this world to do good to others. If we are good and kind towards other, people will respect us for our kindness. Being kind and helpful keeps us happy from within. We feel happiness when we bring smile on the face of others. We earn their good wishes and blessings in return; It makes us a good human being. To help others is the greatest motto of humanity and we should adhere to it. The king is an embodiment of humanity and kindness. What more can be learnt from him.

Q.66 'Love is blind' is a phrase that was justified by Monsieur Loisel in the lesson 'The Necklace'. Substantiate the answer from the story you have read in about 100 – 120 words.

Ans - Monsieur Loisel's acceptance and contentment differ considerably from Matilda's emotional outbursts and constant dissatisfaction, and though he never fully understands his wife, he does his best to please her. When Monsieur Loisel tries to appease Matilda, he does it so blindly, wanting only to make her happy. When she declares that she cannot attend the party because she has nothing to wear, he gives her money to purchase a dress. When she complains that she has no proper jewelry, he urges her to visit Madame Forestier to borrow some.

Monsieur Loisel's eagerness and willingness to please Matilda becomes his downfall when she loses the necklace. He is the one who devises a plan for purchasing a replacement necklace and orchestrates the loans and mortgages that help them pay for it. Although the decision costs him ten years of hard work, he does not complain or imagine an alternate fate. It is as if his desires do not even exist or, at the very least, his desires are meaningless if they stand in the way of Matilda's.

Q.67. 'The Necklace' reveals that vanity is an evil. It may bring joy for short period but ultimately it leads to ruin. If you are placed in a situation similar to that of Matilda, what would you have done? Express your views.

Ans - No doubt, Matilda was proud and self-loving. She was very beautiful and charming and she was proud of her beauty. Because of her beauty, she thought that she was born in a family of clerks through the error of destiny. She felt that she was born for all delicacies and luxuries. She also felt that she was made for expensive frocks, jewels and other such things.

Therefore, we can conclude that Matilda was very vain and proud because of her beauty. When we read the story, we find out that she suffered because of her vanity. If I were placed in a situation similar to that of Matilda, I would have valued the love of my husband. I would have not insisted on buying an expensive dress to wear to the party. There would be no question of borrowing an expensive necklace from my friend. I would have saved me and my husband from all hardships which the Loiseles went through.
